Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to express my interest in a recruiting or human resources role. Across every job I have held, the common thread has been people: finding the right contacts, building relationships, keeping teams coordinated and communicating clearly.

In my current role as an on-site supervisor for a mechanical contractor, I supervise field staff, coordinate schedules across job sites and serve as the main point of contact for clients, general contractors and vendors. I keep documentation organized and introduced Housecall Pro to improve how the team tracks work, experience that translates directly to coordinating candidates, interviews and onboarding steps.

At Berk Communications, I coordinated hosted press trips for national writers, handling invitations, RSVPs, itineraries and travel, much like scheduling candidates through an interview process. At Fanatics Fest NYC, a three-day event with more than 125,000 attendees, I worked on site directing media to the right times and places and helping manage lines. I also built relationships with media contacts, kept contact lists current and ran weekly client calls with agendas and follow-up recaps. At The Growing Artist, I researched potential clients and collaborators and reached out to each one personally, a process much like sourcing and engaging candidates.

As president of UNC Charlotte’s Hispanic College Awareness Program, I led a student organization focused on expanding opportunities for Hispanic students, and I continue to volunteer with the Special Olympics each year. I would bring that same care for people, along with a B.S. in Business Administration, to your team.

Thank you for your time and consideration. I would welcome the chance to talk about how I can help your team, and you can see examples of my work at gregfyfeportfolio.com.

Sincerely,

Gregory Fyfe
